

A MAD LIBS PACKAGE

VERSION 1.0
ARUN DEBRAY
MAY 29, 2015

Mad Libs are a(n) _____ game played by creating a document or story with certain words missing, replaced with lines guiding the _____ to fill them in. One player _____ the others for words to fill in the blanks, and then reads them _____ to other _____ in the room. Often, people play this game at
_____.
(adjective) (noun) (verb) (adjective) (plural noun) (plural noun)

For example, _____ the example, “I got a _____, baby, and I’ll write your name.” The first player asks the rest for a noun, and gets “teapot” in response; so the final _____ is “I got a teapot, baby, and I’ll write your name.”
(noun) (verb) (noun)

One \_\_\_\_\_, I realized that Mad Libs didn’t exist in  $\LaTeX$ . This \_\_\_\_\_ problem needed to be fixed, so I \_\_\_\_\_ this package, to make writing Mad Libs stories much more \_\_\_\_\_. Moreover, thanks to the magic of the hyperref package, it’s possible to generate PDFs that can be filled in. Go ahead, write some \_\_\_\_\_ in the blanks on this page!
(noun) (verb) (adjective) (plural noun)

Commands. Here are the commands you can use.

- Simple parts of speech: `\Noun` creates _____, and you can call `\Verb`, `\Adjective`, `\Adverb`, `\Preposition`, and `\Interjection`, which have the same effects.
(noun)
- Modified parts of speech: `\EdVerb` creates _____, `\IngVerb` produces _____, and `\PluralNoun` generates _____.
(verb (ed)) (verb (ing)) (plural noun)
- Finally, a few commands aren’t exactly parts of speech. `\Number` produces _____, and `\Exclamation` creates _____. Then, `\PersonInRoom` makes _____, and `\Place` creates _____.
(number) (exclamation) (person in room) (place)
- If you want to write your own Mad Libs categories, use `\PartOfSpeech{word}`. For example, `\PartOfSpeech{binky}` produces _____.
(binky)
